Scott,

We've received a routine inquiry from the DC Circuit mediation office asking us to advise them whether we are interested in pursuing mediation in the new CPP reconsideration denial litigation. The Court has asked for a response by March 2.

Dear Attorneys

Dear Attorneys:

We write to find out if you might be interested in exploring settlement of this matter through our mediation program. This is a routine inquiry that we try to make in all civil cases pending in the circuit.

Please respond by March 2, 2017. Your comments and suggestions are taken seriously. Our experience has been that the mediation process is usually more productive when the parties have agreed to participate and have some ideas about how the case might be resolved or how some of the issues could be simplified.

If you have any questions about the mediation process or would like to discuss this matter in general, please feel free to contact me separately. I have attached a copy of the court's mediation procedures.

Please note that a referral to mediation does not automatically stay the dates for filing the docketing statement, certificate as to parties, statement of issues, the filing of the underlying decision, appendix statement, procedural motions, dispositive motions, initial submissions, procedural motions, entry of appearance, briefing schedule or oral argument. However, the court is usually receptive to a joint motion or a consent motion to postpone or stay these matters to accommodate settlement talks. However, please note that if the court grants such a request to stay the briefing schedule or oral argument, you may lose your panel if one has been assigned.

Please also note that if your case goes into mediation or you engage in serious direct settlement negotiations, you will be required to inform the Clerk Of the Court. This is to better enable the judges to make the best use of their time and resources. Please see the attached Notice. We have interpreted this notice requirement to come into play on the date you receive notice of the oral argument.

We appreciate your cooperation and assistance.
